"I just wim Latural gas had been around when we first into business," says Roy King, owner-manager of Vet-nic Cleaners in downtown Elba. "It would have saved me thousand dollars.

When we opened the shop right after World War II," then we opened the shop right after vivilla viol.

The cost was sometimed our boiler with propone. The cost was sometimed to tuel oil.

The string of 1956 we changed over to natural gas. and that's $480 a year. Our natural gas is cleaner, too, all-important in a first-class cleaning and pressing Another big advantage of natural cas," King says, "is its speed—its efficiency. It gets our boiler up to 80 pounds pressure in 25 minutes, compared with about 45 minutes for other fuels. It's cleaner, quicker, and a whole lot cheaper. What else can I say to prove that I really like natural gas!

YOU TOO CAN LIVE BETTER ON LESS MONEY WITH NATURAL GAS!

MR. ROY KING in his successful, modern dry-cleaning establishment. Being a good business man, he has proved to his own satisfaction that natural gas is best for economy, speed, and cleonliness.

If one prefers the outdoor life he will find it at the seashore of Lebanon on the Eastern Mediterranean. He can swim in any number of smart beach clubs, the shore frequently merely a few steps from the door of the hotel. The St. George hotel in the very heart of Beirut, the Capital, is headquarters for a water skiers club that sponsors international aquatic ski meets. It is staging the Lebanese national championships this month, and will present a grand spectacle on Sept. 28 when the Presand will present a grand speciacle on Sept. 28 when the President of Italy visits Lebanon, one of the Bible Lands, as a guest of President Camille Chamoun.

South of Beirut in the direction of its International airport are three popular beaches whose fine sandy shores and "cabines" remind one of the Riviera. Beach parties are part of the gay life in this capital city—especially for Europeans and Americans employed by the U.S. government, oil companies and international corporations.

icans employed by the U.S. government, oil companies and international corporations.

Yachting is another popular summer sport. White sail boats glide gracefully past the shoreline throughout the day. Many Lebanese, among them President Chamoun, own motor launches and weekends find them cruising about the coastline with their families and guests, either fishing or just relaxing. Hotels arrange trips for their guests who like deep-sea fishing, such excursions often taking the tourists to Sidon or Tyre, the ancient seaports of Phoenician and Biblical fame.

A union of modern art and the ancient Assyrian art has taken place in Iraq where talented young artists are creating new, distinctly Arab paintings and sculptures which nevertheless reflect the traditions of thousands of years.

The Baghdad Modern Art Group, composed of young men and was founded by tradising the traditions of thousands of years.

Was founded by Iraq's internationally famous painter and sculptor, Jawad Selim, Mr. Selim has studied art in France, Italy, England the property of the propert and Iraq and received many prizes for his work. His first honor was a first prize in a state exhibition in Iraq when he was 12. The artist, now 36, began his studies in Iraq and later won a The artist, now 36, began his studies in Iraq and later won a scholarship to the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. He moved on to Rome's Academia de Belle Arti until the Second World War interrupted his studies in 1940 and he returned to Baghdad During the war, Mr. Selim founded the first class of modelling at the Baghdad Institute of Fine Arts at the same time working on the Baghdad Institute of Fine Arts, at the same time working on the restoration of ancient masterpieces. His later works show the deep absorption with these historic treasures. After more studies in London at the Slade School, where he received a first prize for modelling and a first prize for the sculpture of an "Unknown Political Prisoner" at an international exhibition in 1952 Selim Political Prisoner" at an international exhibition in 1952 Selim Political Prisoner. hibition in 1953, Selim again returned to Iraq to found the Modern Art Group. He has become the leading spokesman for young Iraqi artists who were trying to develop a modern art style of their own by taking advantage of their country's rich heritage of Islamic, Babylonian and Sumerian influences. Because of his skillful assimilation of past and present values, Jawad Selim was chosen in 1954 to represent Iraq for the first time in the United States in a one-man show Americans then had a change to view such saulatures as the improvements.

had a chance to view such sculptures as the impressive wood carving of "Mother and Child." These modern sculptures are a long historical step from the ancient Assyrian masterpieces shown in the British Museum. However, this gap between ancient and modern art has now been bridged by artists like Iraq's Selim, who are successfully linking past and present in a great new modern national art

Bucking—that's when you cut a log into sections, you know—can cause a feller a little trouble. 'Specially on steep ground—cause you have to be careful not to get the cutter bar and chain caught fast in the kerf. (That's the open space made by a saw as it cuts through a log.) Before you start bucking, it's best to size up the situation.

If he's not careful, a bucker can make himself a trap by making a cut at the wrong angle! 'Cause—if he cuts at the wrong angle—the logs won't fall apart, and the bar and chain will be caught fast! Generally, if the direction of the angle had been reversed, the lower log would drop away, and the bar and chain would be left free.

Accordin' to Ol' Hannibal, the elephant looked down at a mouse and exclaimed, "you're jest about the puniest, most insignificant object I ever laid eyes on."
"I'm not always this little," the mouse squeaked angrily, "I've been sick."

Sometimes, while bucking, it's necessary to bore into a log. Other times, boring is the easiest way of doing the preliminary bucking in order to prevent a log from splitting. Sometimes fellers have trouble getting started boring, 'cause the end of the bar won't stay put where they want it. A good way to overcome this is by starting well under the lower quarter of the log, with the tip end of the bar and chain, then saw upward a short distance before the actual boring begins. By giving the bar a slight twist as you press your weight against twist as you press your weight against the machine, boring will proceed without the bar and chain kicking our
